

Lullaby for Stardust
Lyrics: Ethan Place

You rose up on a vapor trail

Then seven years you flew

On solar wings, the why of things we wish we knew...

So off you went to catch a comet's tail.

You blinked at storms as big as worlds
Volcanoes breathing ice
Inertia's course back to the source of carbon's splice...
Where flecks of stars gave birth to helix curls.

Prowling through the stellar winds

An orbit now you'll keep

With lullaby ones and zeros

We'll sing you sound to sleep, to sleep...

Gravity's fools, we thrash and turn
Insomniacs with clocks
So slow, so fast weighed down at last by ticks and tocks
We close our eyes and see the rocket's burn.

Prowling through the stellar winds

An orbit now you'll keep

With lullaby ones and zeros

We'll sing you sound to sleep, to sleep...
